

In Another Place And Here

Photography, place, and identity. This publication explores the work of photographers from around the world as a shared investigation into the relationships between the self and place. Instead of an encyclopedic view of the natural world that characterized colonial-era photography, these artists insist on the unknowability of the landscape and the subjects who inhabit it. Nadia Huggins (St. Vincent & the Grenadines) captures contemporary Caribbean existence with psychological intensity through subtle use of light and dark; O Neil Lawrence (Jamaica) infuses his work with light and its interplay with figures on the shores of the Caribbean; Mike Andrew McLean (Canada) draws upon research into the historical and contemporary uses of photography; Meryl McMaster (Canada) explores questions of identity, perception, myth and the environment; Troy Moth (Canada) depicts mysterious compositions in remote environments; Dawit Petros (Eritrea/USA) focuses on a critical rereading of the relationship between African histories and European modernism; Krista Belle Stewart (Canada) engages the complexities of intention and interpretation made possible by archival material; and Li Xinmo (China) concentrates on issues of gender, ethnicity, the environment, and national politics, the environment, and national politics.
