

Cabinet 47: Logistics

Every time you put a letter in the mail, every time you stop at a traffic light, a complex--and usually invisible--network of logistics is at work. Cabinet issue 47, with a special section on Logistics, features James Whittington on the diaries of Dmitri Pavlov, the Soviet official who determined who would eat and who would starve during the siege of Leningrad; Jacqueline Bochner on the harmonization of international postal systems; Daniella Stone on the logistics of the hospital kitchen; and a travelogue from the Cabinet Hand-Delivered Issue Road Trip. Elsewhere in the issue: Rasha Salti on intrigue and celebrity in the bar of Beirut's Phoenicia Hotel; Jeffrey Kastner on saintly incorruptibles; and Will Wiles on Bill Phillips' MONIAC, a device that models the national economy using the flow of liquids.
