

An Introduction to Sufism

It is said that Sufism is a current of Islamic mysticism; this way, you have said everything, or nothing. For the man of our times, in the computer age, Sufism reveals itself as a science of the mind, advanced psychology and pedagogy, which may put the individual in the best touch with his fellow men. Today that it is spoken about the death of God, and is inclined to looking for the meaning of life, Sufism may turn to the innermost of our being, leading us towards Self-Realization. Transpersonal psychology needs Sufism, which, today, we may find in many forms and teachings, sometimes hidden, to the point it seems unrecognizable. The author, a philosopher and orientalist, deals with the relationship of Sufism with Islam, on the historical and doctrinal basis, then analyzes the figures of masters and the Orders, and, above all, highlights the huge contribution that Sufism may give philosophy and meditation, two tools man seems to have lost sight of, letting himself seduce by a commanding Ego, who thinks, mistakenly, he may do without it, not understanding that thereby he condemns himself to loneliness and an empty life, full with illusions.
