

Talks About Art (Classic Reprint)

Dec. 1876). DuR IKQ a recent trip to the United States I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of W. M. Hunt the great American painter, to whom I was introduced in his own atelier in Boston by my friend J. T. Fields. At the time of my visit he was engaged in correcting the drawings of a class of female students and he invited me to come and look on while he continued his occupation. I was struck by the clear incisive observations which the several efforts of the students elicited as he passed them in review, and I was soon sensible that I was in the presence of a great Teacher, whose teaching, while impressed by the French training he had received in Paris, was clothed in language distinctly original, racy and American.
