Not illustrated. 1782 Excerpt: ... The celebrated Professor Morgagni supposes the disease produced by HydatidS forming within the Tunica Vaginalis, brt the body of the Testis, and on ihe Epidydimis, which bursting, discharge their contents within the coat, and so produce the accumulation. The appearances which Morgagni describes, and supposes to be the remains of ruptured Hydatids, I took notice of several years ago in sound Testicles, where no Hydrocele had ever ex ifted: from which time I have never failed seeing, and often demonstrating them, in all the adult Testicles I have examined. And since the publication of his work, De Causis Sc Sedib. Morbor. I have looked for them in subjects Of all ages, and have hitherto found them as constantly in infants as adults. The symptoms by which this disease may be distinguished from others affecting the Scrotum, are described in so masterly a manner by the latest writers on this subject, particularly by our own countrymen, Samuel Sharpe, Douglas, Pott. B 2 that that it is unnecessary for me to point them out. I will only observe, that no rule hitherto laid down, will afford us an infallible criterion of its difference from some other disorders of the Scrotum. Hence surgeons of the very first rank, have at one time mistaken the Hydrocele for the scirrhous Testicle; and at another, the scirrhous Testicle for the Hydrocele. I have seen more than one instance, where, after due consultation, castration has been advised, upon the presumption of a scirrhous Testicle; and where the discovery was sometimes made before, but, indeed, sometimes not till after the operation was completed, that the Testicle was sound, and that the deception was owing to a thickening and induration of the Tunica Vaginalis distended with water. As the Hydrocele is so liable to b...
